

Anyone and Everyone Reactions

Allendale:

The film was stunning and emotional although not entirely accurate. The film showed more accepting families than there really are. Hopefully the future will be more like the film.

I really liked this film because it showed not only how it affects the child and the parents, but it also shows how much it affects the other family members and why coming out is such a different process for everyone that is involved.

It was great. I think they should make every parent in the world watch it. Like, tie them down. Any parent should be able to identify with something, even if they have straight kids.

- Deanna, student

Everyone needs love, just because they are different doesn't mean you can not love them.

I related, remembered, and cried. People like me, that got through the struggle of coming out. I felt relief that maybe I can also make it.

- Drea, student

Wonderful! Real and emotional.

Spring Lake:

Very powerful. I see myself in many of the stories.

They said everything I said when our son came out in 1995. It was like reliving those early days all over again.

- Carmen, Holland PFLAG

Everyone needs to see it. We need everyone to see it.

A+ I thought the film was great – so well done on such a sensitive topic. It should be shown in schools and theaters.

I was saddened to hear 26% of kids who come out are kicked out of their homes/families. Where can these kids go and how can we as a community find, help and embrace them?

- Debra Schubert, C3 member

Very positive. The people were well spoken. Every parent should see this film. Every church should show this film. There is hope. Attitudes still change with knowledge. People change people.

- Doug, Holland PFLAG

Very inspiration and enlightening.
